“ One of my first memories of you is so simple, yet it has stayed with me my entire life. My brother and I playing in the piles of leaves you had just raked. I can still remember the way the world felt in that moment—the crisp air, the gloomy sky, and the pure joy that somehow made everything feel warm. I often return to my childhood memories, and every time the leaves begin to fall, I am taken right back to that day with you.

The memories of the state fair are ones I will never forget. I enjoyed every second of them. When you babysat me, you taught me so much—not just through lessons, but through stories. You had the best stories. You introduced me to my favorite book and film, Little Women, something that still means so much to me today. I remember us cutting out paper masks like it was yesterday, laughing and creating together.

These moments became part of who I am. They are core memories that shaped my childhood and stayed with me into adulthood. Now, they live on as memories from you.

Grandma, I love you so much. You will always be with me—in the falling leaves, in stories, and in the quiet moments where love still feels close.

Love your granddaughter Jessica

“ My best friend, but most importantly the greatest MOM on the planet. You have been the pillar of our family; you have groomed us to be consummate gentlemen, you sacrificed your own wants and needs without fail, above your own. My casino buddy. My confidant. My heart is broken. I will never forget the lifetime we shared together. I am eternally grateful for the advice, friendship, love, sacrifice, support, understanding, RIP Mother Duck.

I never had the pleasure of meeting you even though we had several telephone conversations. But I did meet you when I met our dear Chris. He was/is the epitome of a gentleman - we all love him: my family, friends especially military. I could fill this message board describing what a great person he is. You did it right my sister 👍. I have always been proud to be his other mother. See you on the other side my dear
